Anne-Mette works as a consultant at Mobilize Strategy Consulting A/S with a primary focus on universities, hospitals and high school institutions in Denmark and Norway. From 2006-2016 she has worked as a facilitator and co-developer at the Research Management Course, which is a course held by CBS Executive for research leaders in Denmark and Norway. Parallel to this, she has worked as a project leader and analyst in FOA, one of the biggest trade unions in Denmark, where she worked with economic and efficiency analyses of large public welfare areas and taught classes in public economics and political communication.

Anne-Mette is a Master of Science in Political Communication and Leadership from Copenhagen Business School and a PRINCE2-certified project leader. She has authorisation to conduct JTI (Jungian Type Index) assessments, using it as a tool to explore individual preferences and team dynamics. Furthermore, she has studied Organisational Psychology and Culture at The University of Sheffield in the UK.

Anne-Mette is an experienced process leader and facilitator and she is particularly interested in change and resource management and cultural analysis in large public organisations. Her primary competences lie within the areas of process and project leadership, communication in politically controlled organisations as well as managing political interests.
